For more than a decade, higher education and research in the French-speaking countries of Africa has been in a state of severe crisis, stemming from an increasing disparity between available resources and the requirements vital to providing high-quality education. 'Higher Education in Francophone Africa' seeks to:1) highlight the factors which have led to the development of this situation in most countries;2) identify the conditions for creating a framework for regulating financially-sustainable higher education and research systems; and3) identify ways of increasing funding for this sector as well as maintaining its quality.
